Will you Be Mine

Our Conservatory was the setting of an intimate dinner for Valley couples this Valentine's Day. Our lovebirds dined at private tables for two, with fresh flowers, music, and candlelight, creating a romantic ambiance. Red and pink balloons created a beautiful frame for portraits of our lovely couples, capturing a precious memory for all who attended!

Valley's Valentine's couples Elizabeth and Hans Rott (above), and Arthur and Willie Wingfield, (at right) pose in our festive red balloon archway.

June Sink and Charles Grant make a picture-perfect duo.

Just our Luck

Roanoke's Annual St. Patrick's Day Parade was the perfect chance to wear green—even our Valley bus got all dressed up! Residents joined the celebration, riding in style and waving to the crowds along the route of one of Roanoke's most popular and cherished downtown traditions. In the building, our team hosted an Irish-themed party with music, food, and treats!

Ginger Barton and Tony Freeman relax and enjoy the ride.

State of the "Art"

A resident-organized art show brought color, texture, and beauty to our lobby! Our creatively inclined residents showcased a variety of pieces, from paintings and photography, to knitting, quilting, and so much more. It was wonderful to see their works, both new and old, which celebrated their personal expression and talent.

Judy Price happily shares her delicious Russian tea mix!

Getting Schooled

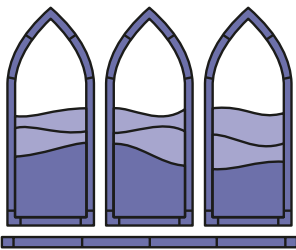

One of the greatest perks of our Gainsboro location is being steps away from Roanoke Catholic School and their kind students. We always look forward to visits from our young friends. A big thank you to middle school students from the Future Business Leaders of American who joined our Christopher Center residents for a rousing game of Bingo!

Are you a member of a local church, club, or other organization that would be interested in volunteering with residents? Learn more about future volunteer opportunities and the application process—contact Hannah Porter, Director of Life Enrichment, at hporter@ourladyofthevalley.com.
